"with our advanced imaging technologies and the latest technology, we are providing the most efficient image presentation and providing a crystal-clear view in immersive content creation," said jung beom-koo, chief executive of samsung electronics india. "with 4k resolution and superior brightness, it is about time someone from the industry talks about how the consumer needs are being met." samsung already has in-market 4k tvs and other products, but this is now the biggest jump yet. in fact, samsung has just begun manufacturing its first 4k projector. the launch of this product, especially with 4k resolution technology, shows how far samsung has come with its tv products. when it was first introduced, it was described as a living room replacement for crt tvs. in the next few years, it will only get better with 4k resolution and far better picture quality than the old crt tvs. although this technology is still in its infancy, the projects industry is still giving 4k adoption a try. this new technology can be found in movie theaters, automotive, and even home theaters. while this can be seen as a good thing, it also means there will be additional costs. there will be new development costs, as manufacturers are putting in more money and design time to create the best products possible. there will be a new player entering the market, with a new company, who will need to make their own mark and create their own brand. while 4k adoption is still in its early days, this new technology from samsung is looking to offer the best resolution possible, with a big jump in quality over older resolutions. the oregonian/oregonlive/getty images president donald trump wants schools to teach students that homosexuality is unhealthy, wrong, and harmful, but he doesn't seem to have much interest in the effort to teach kids that a bigoted, amoral, racist, sexist, homophobic, islamophobic, transphobic, xenophobic bigot and the president of the united states is doing a bang-up job.
